

This is a high-contrast, black and white illustration of pomegranates and their foliage. The top portion of the image features two pomegranates that have been cut open, showing the internal structure and the dark, seed-filled arils. Below these are four whole pomegranates, depicted with varying degrees of shading to suggest their rounded form and textured skin. The bottom half of the image is dominated by a large, intricate cluster of pomegranate leaves and branches, with several individual leaves scattered to the right, showing their characteristic elongated shape and serrated edges. The entire illustration is rendered in a stark, graphic style with no mid-tones.